Aquatherm is a 40-year-old, German engineered product that's used in domestic water, compressed air, glycol, and a variety of other piping applications. Additional strengths include its efficiency and sustainability characteristics. The leak-free connections, resistance to scale, and minimum 60-year life expectancy are unmatched by other systems. This piping system is a solution to many of problems associated with metallic piping systems. The building facilities concern for long-term maintenance and repair costs are significantly reduced.
